McNees Attorney Selected to Serve on IACP Practice Group Development Committee

Harrisburg, Pa. – (January 4, 2018) McNees Wallace & Nurick LLC Attorney Ann Levin has been selected to serve on the International Academy of Collaborative Professionals (IACP) Practice Group Development Committee.

The Practice Group Development Committee has been charged to engage and build relationships with Practice Groups from around the world, serve as a resource to practice groups, guide practice groups to better serve their members, increase awareness of IACP support, gather insight from practice group leaders on how the IACP can provide more value to its members and recommend other means of support to practice groups.

Ann has been practicing family law in Central Pennsylvania since 1995. Her practice is focused on helping divorce clients who desire to move beyond the divorce and put their children's needs first.

Ann is a dedicated and compassionate attorney who is committed to developing client awareness of alternative process options and assists them when seeking to terminate their marriage through litigation or a collaborative approach. Her collaborative divorce practice continues to grow as divorcing couples realize that there are alternatives to litigation. The collaborative process allows clients to resolve their divorce related issues with dignity and privacy.

For those with issues involving children, this settlement-focused approach offers the opportunity for successful co-parenting following separation. As a mother of two children, she is sensitive to child related issues at every developmental stage and has an analytical and practical approach to problem solving.

IACP is the International Academy of Collaborative Professionals, an international community of legal, mental health and financial professionals working in concert to create client-centered processes for resolving conflict. IACP has over 5,000 members from 24 countries around the world. They are dedicated to educating the public about the Collaborative alternative and are committed to fostering professional excellence in conflict resolution through Collaborative Practice.
