McNees' Joseph Sileo Speaks at Business Breakfast Briefing

SCRANTON, Pa. – McNees Wallace & Nurick attorney Joseph Sileo spoke at the Greater Scranton Chamber of Commerce's Business Breakfast Briefing (B3) on Friday, June 2 from at the Hilton Scranton & Conference Center.

A member of the McNees Labor & Employment practice group, Sileo presented "Employee Handbooks: Best Practices." This presentation offered guidance and recommendations on how a good employee handbook provides significant value to both employer and employees by communicating effective employment policies, work performance expectations, workplace rules, and other important employment-related information.

Sileo, of the firm's Scranton office, counsels and provides advice and training to employers in all industries with respect to employment-related issues, including wage and hour compliance, work performance management, discipline, equal opportunity and fair employment practices, hiring practices and termination decisions, litigation avoidance, employee leave issues, retaliation, non-compete and separation agreements, unemployment compensation, and also in connection with collective bargaining administration and arbitration matters. He frequently represents employers in connection with OSHA and wage and hour matters.
