NEWS RELEASE

Vandeventer Black's Hague Selected as Chair of VADA's Professional Liability Section

Richmond, VA (October 19, 2020) – Tracy Taylor Hague, an Of Counsel with Vandeventer Black LLP's Richmond office, was selected as Chair of the Professional Liability Section for the Virginia Association of Defense Attorneys (VADA) for 2020-21. Ms. Hague has been a member of the VADA since 2002 and is actively involved in their Medical Malpractice and Professional Liability Sections. In addition, she is a frequent lecturer at VADA meetings and has presented continuing legal education courses at the VADA Spring Seminar, the New Associates' Bootcamp, and the Right Start Seminar.

"I am honored to have been selected as the new Chair of the Professional Liability Section of the VADA. I am looking forward to meeting some of our section members in the coming year and to sharing ideas and information to benefit our respective practices," said Hague.

The VADA is a voluntary bar association comprised of over 850 attorneys focused on the defense of civil actions throughout Virginia. According to VADA's website, the mission of the association "is to assist Virginia attorneys in the professional and ethical representation of their clients in civil litigation through education, communication, and fellowship."

Ms. Hague is a trial attorney who focuses her practice on the defense of professionals, including attorneys, realtors, insurance agents and brokers, physicians, psychologists, dentists, nurses, and various health care facilities such as hospitals and large academic medical centers. She also regularly defends a variety of personal injury cases, including cases involving catastrophic injuries and death. For more information, visit VanBlackLaw.com.
