McNees Attorney Appointed to Serve as Employment and Labor Law Section Chair for the Lancaster Bar Association

LANCASTER, PA (October 27, 2016) – McNees Wallace & Nurick attorney Denise Elliott has been appointed to serve as the Employment and Labor Law Section Chair for the Lancaster Bar Association (LBA) for 2017.

Formerly the chair of the Workers' Compensation Section for the LBA, Elliott practices in McNees' Labor and Employment group.

"I am honored to serve as Chair of the Employment Law Section of the LBA," Elliott said. "The LBA is a vital and integral part of the Lancaster legal community and always supports its members. Accordingly, I'm delighted to serve the LBA in any way that I can."

Founded in 1792, the Lancaster Bar Association works to serve by advising charitable, religious, educational, civic, and cultural organizations. The LBA has had notable members such as George Ross, a signer of the Declaration of Independence and a member of the first Continental Congress; Jasper Yeates and John Hubley, delegates to the Pennsylvania Convention who voted to ratify the U.S. Constitution; and James Buchanan, the 15th President of the United States.

An experienced litigator, Elliott represents public and private sector employers in all phases of employment related litigation, including before state and federal courts, arbitrators, administrative law judges (such as workers' compensation judges and unemployment compensation referees), and administrative agencies, including the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission and the Pennsylvania Human Relations Commission.

Elliott is a frequent speaker on workers' compensation and employment law topics and was named a 2014 and 2015 Select Lawyer. She is admitted to practice in the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania, before the Federal District Courts in the Eastern and Middle Districts of Pennsylvania, and before the Supreme Court of the United States.
